It covers all modes of evaluation such as summative assessment (theory, practical, project work, viva-voce, Internship), formative assessment (continuous assessment), and competency-based assessments. The policy is applicable to regular, arrear, and supplementary examinations

6.1 Semester Based Education

The University has decided to adopt semester based system. The advantages of a semester-based education include continuous learning and feedback, which improves regular study habits and provides a better understanding of subjects due to divided workloads and more frequent assessment opportunities. This system also offers flexibility for designing varied courses, allows for more focused class interaction with increased teacher-student engagement, and helps prevent excessive academic burden by distributing the syllabus into smaller, more manageable parts.

6.2 Choice Based Credit System

The students are given variety of choices to earn credit to pass the subject. The student can excel in term-end examination to earn pass grade or they can participate in subject specific events/activities to earn credits. The entire syllabus is divided into Core, Profession Elective, Open Elective Course, Mandatory and Foundation. The students are allowed to select the courses they want to study during the course of studies. The students are offered the choice of subjects from all the streams. They can select subjects from any discipline. They can also publish a research paper to earn required credit to pass the subject. This promotes multidisciplinary learning.

7. Scope and Applicability

The policy is applicable to all undergraduate, postgraduate, diploma, certificate, and research programmes offered by AMET University. The policy is applicable to regular, arrear, and supplementary examinations. It covers all modes of evaluation such as summative assessment (theory, practical, project work, viva-voce, Internship), formative assessment (continuous assessment), and competency-based assessments.

INSTITUTIONAL DEVELOPMENT PLAN (IDP) 2025–2030

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

AMET University’s Institutional Development Plan (IDP) 2025–2030 presents a comprehensive roadmap for institutional growth, guided by the mandate of the University Grants Commission (UGC) and aligned with the National Education Policy (NEP) 2020. As the University transitions from a specialised maritime institution to a multidisciplinary university of national and international prominence, the IDP outlines strategic objectives, implementation pathways, and measurable outcomes that will shape AMET’s developmental trajectory.

Over the last decade, AMET has consolidated its identity as India’s premier maritime university while expanding academic presence into engineering, computing, allied health sciences, commerce, management, and digital education. Significant achievements include hosting the IAMU Annual General Assembly 2025 (a first in India), receiving the Government of India’s Sagar Ratna Award 2025 for excellence in maritime education and skill development, and establishing deep industry partnerships with AP Moller Maersk, V Ships, Fleet Management, Kalvi, FACE Prep, NIAT, Emversity, Global Aviation Pvt Ltd, Microsoft, IBM, RedHat, and CII.

The IDP recognises this strong foundation and outlines structured development across nine UGC-mandated components. These include governance reforms, financial sustainability, curriculum strengthening, teaching–learning innovation, faculty development, enhanced research culture, stronger industry and international collaborations, infrastructure modernisation, and digital transformation.

The plan is supported by a robust monitoring mechanism through institutional dashboards, IQAC oversight, Academic and Administrative Audits (AAA), and periodic performance reviews. With clear SMART goals, performance indicators, and risk mitigation strategies, the IDP provides a credible, outcome-oriented approach to institutional advancement.

SWOC ANALYSIS

Strengths

AMET University's greatest strength lies in its unique identity as a comprehensive maritime university offering a 360-degree coverage of maritime ecosystem disciplines ranging from ship design, construction, operations, navigation, mechanical and electrical systems, logistics, port operations, ocean science, and marine biotechnology, to maritime business and allied engineering domains. This integrated ecosystem is rare among Indian universities. The University's strong industry partnerships ensure exceptional alignment between classroom teaching and real-world industry needs. Strategic collaborations with shipping majors and skill development companies have resulted in consistently high placement rates (including 100% in core maritime programmes). The University's robust research culture, supported by significant funded projects, patents, and a thriving innovation ecosystem (ACIIE), further strengthens its academic standing. AMET's international visibility, highlighted by hosting IAMU AGM 2025, distinguishes it within the global maritime academic community.

Weaknesses

The University's rapid growth has created a need for proportionate expansion of land and physical infrastructure. Certain departments require additional senior faculty with global exposure. The research output, though significant, is concentrated in selected departments and must be broadened. Some administrative processes require further digitisation and integration under a unified ERP environment.

Opportunities

There is significant scope to expand online and distance education for the global maritime and logistics workforce. NEP 2020 provides an enabling environment for multidisciplinary expansion, academic flexibility, internationalisation, and blended learning. Opportunities exist to collaborate with foreign universities for joint programmes and to establish international offshore centres. The Blue Economy focus of the Government of India offers new funding possibilities for research and training.

Challenges

Growing competition from national and global players in online and maritime education may impact enrolment. Rapid technological changes in maritime operations demand frequent curriculum updates. Regulatory compliance across UGC, DEB, DGS, AICTE, and international bodies must be handled with precision. Coastal vulnerability to climate risks remains a long-term environmental challenge.
